

APPENDIX III - How to search for European Assessment Documents on construction products

What is an EAD?

A European Assessment Document (EAD) is a harmonised technical specification developed by European Organisation for Technical Assessment (EOTA) as the basis for European Technical Assessments (ETAs).

The European Technical Assessment (ETA) provides an independent Europe-wide procedure for assessing the essential performance characteristics of non-standard construction products ¹.

The ETA offers manufacturers a voluntary route to CE marking, when the product is not or not fully covered by a harmonised standard (hEN) under the Construction Products Regulation (EU) 305/2011.

In combination with the ETA, the EAD provides manufacturers with a way to CE marking for construction products that are not or not fully covered by a harmonised European standard (hEN) under the Construction Products Regulation (EU) 305/2011. ¹

How to read an EAD number¹

EOTA codes the EAD number "ECNNNN-VS-PGSG" according to the following principles
Product area according to Annex IV of the CPR	(EC NNNN-VS-PGSG)
subsequent number in that product area	(EC NNNN -VS-PGSG)
version	(ECNNNN- VS -PGSG)
ETA product area code	(ECNNNN-ED- PGSG)

Where can EADs be found?

- EOTA Database¹ - EAD texts that have been cited in the Official Journal of the European Union via the EOTA EADs Database can be browsed here.
- EU Single Market Compliance Space² - Lists of EAD codes and associated notified bodies can be viewed on the EU Compliance Space Portal.

How to search for a Construction Product EAD

1 - Open the EOTA EADs database³. Note the search & filter options and the EAD table below. The table shows:

- The EAD Number, a unique reference number for each EAD (as outlined above);
- The EAD Title, a description of the product;
- OJEU (Official Journal of the European Union), the reference number for the citation of the product in the OJEU;
- The Status of the EAD, states whether the EAD is Pending citation in the OJEU, has already been cited, has been superseded by a more recent version which has been cited or has been Merged with other similar related documents.

In the above example a search for Glulam returned a single EAD. As per the Status, the EAD has been ‘Cited’ in the Official Journal of the European Union and the reference number for the citation is given under OJEU. In this instance the OJEU reference includes ‘Decision (EU)’, indicating that the EAD has officially been reviewed by the European Commission and cited.

5 – Once located, the EAD⁵ itself can be downloaded by clicking ‘Download’ under the description of the EAD.

6 - Additional Information on EADs can be found on the European Commission list⁶. This includes the Journal reference, Journal date and Applicability Date. Information on the relevant notified bodies can also be located here.

EADs can be searched by their EAD number or description and filtered by whether they are still Active or Obsolete.
